around town.

San Ignacio in Belize, Central America, is known for its wide variety of outdoor activities, so there really is something for everyone. Canoeing on the Macal River is a popular activity, where most guided tours include a stop at Blue Morpho (a butterfly sanctuary) and Belize Botanical Gardens. If you prefer to stay more grounded, there are no shortage of options on dry land. Rent a bike and take it along the well-traveled Branch Mouth Road, which leads to Hammock Bridge. After a day filled with adventure, make sure you book a room at one of the highly recommended resorts

Ka'ana Boutique Resort and Spa

Located in the Cayo District, this internationally recognized resort is a great choice for a romantic getaway or a family vacation. The rooms are spacious and clean, where there are two lodging options—balam (rooms) or casita (small guesthouses). The resort's small size allows guests to be especially catered to, where staff pay attention to every detail. There are several dining options on the premises—from fine dining to fantasy dining—where you can customize your meal, from the menu to the location. Personalized tours can be arranged at the front desk—whether you want to explore Maya ruins or fly through the jungle on a zip line—there is something for everyone.

Located in the heart of the jungle, this eco-lodge is set on a private nature reserve, next to the shores of the Macal River. The lodge is beautifully designed around its natural settings and wildlife is right outside your window.

Rated as one of the top eco-lodges worldwide by National Geographic in 2008, this resort offers outdoor activities ranging from exploring the surrounding rainforest to canoeing in the nearby river.

The lodge has 23 luxurious palm-thatched rooms, including two garden suites. Dining takes place in the cozy setting of the lodge's main al fresco restaurant. Listen to a symphony of wild birds as you eat meals prepared with local produce, as most it is grown right on the premises of its organic Mayan farm.

Mingle with other guests and swap stories of your daily adventures at the verandah bar, while sipping on a specialized cocktail.
